Speak Easy — Arabic (العربية) review sheet

Spoken Canadian English for adult learners · 79 translated lines · 11 tips for Arabic speakers

Thank you for helping! Speak Easy is a free course for adult newcomers. Learners who choose Arabic see a one-line summary of each lesson in Arabic, plus tips about common difficulties for Arabic speakers.

Please check: (1) Is each translation correct and natural for adult learners? Simple words are best. (2) Are the tips in Part 2 and Part 3 accurate for Arabic speakers?
Tick OK or Fix, and write any correction in the last column. The English column is the lesson's English introduction, for context — the translation is a short summary, not a word-for-word translation.

Part 2 — Language page (“Tips for Arabic speakers”)

| Text | Check | Correction / comment |
|---|---|---|
| هذه أهم النقاط التي يحتاج إليها متحدثو العربية عند تعلّم الإنجليزية المحكية. | ☐ OK☐ Fix | |
| Sounds to practise /p/ vs /b/ ( park/bark ) and /f/ vs /v/ ( fan/van ) /tʃ/ in chair , chicken Short vowels: bit / bet / bat / but No extra vowel in consonant groups: street, spring, asked Grammar to watch a / an before jobs and singular nouns; no article for general ideas am / is / are in every present sentence Present perfect for situations continuing until now Good news Standard Arabic has both TH sounds (ث and ذ). Arabic has a tapped r — just like the Canadian flap T in water . | ☐ OK☐ Fix | |

Part 3 — Tips inside lessons (written in simple English)

| # | Lesson | Tip | Check | Correction / comment |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | Consonant Sounds | Arabic has /b/ but no /p/, so park can sound like bark and pin like bin . Practise /p/ with the paper test — you need a puff of air. Arabic also has no /v/ (practise very , not “fery”), and in many dialects no /tʃ/ (practise chicken , not “shicken”). Don’t add a vowel to consonant groups: street , not “istreet”; spring , not “sipring”. | ☐ OK☐ Fix | |
| 2 | TH: think and this | Good news: Standard Arabic has both TH sounds — ث is /θ/ ( think ) and ذ is /ð/ ( this ). If your dialect uses t/d or s/z instead, use the ث and ذ you know from Standard Arabic or Qur’anic recitation. | ☐ OK☐ Fix | |
| 3 | W vs V | Arabic و is just like English W, so W is easy. V does not exist in Arabic, and it often becomes /f/: “fery” for very , “fan” for van . Put your top teeth on your bottom lip and add your voice — you should feel a buzz. | ☐ OK☐ Fix | |

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 4 | Final Consonants: bag / back | Arabic words rarely end in two or three consonants, so learners often add a vowel (“ask-id”) or drop a consonant. Remember: asked = “askt”, worked = “workt” — one syllable. | ☐ OK☐ Fix | |
| 5 | Short and Long Vowels: ship / sheep | Arabic also has short and long vowels (كسرة and ياء), so the idea of length is familiar. But English /ɪ/ ( ship ) is lower and more relaxed than kasra, and many Arabic speakers mix up /ɪ/ and /e/: bit/bet , pin/pen , sit/set . | ☐ OK☐ Fix | |
| 6 | cat / cut / bet | Arabic has three main vowel qualities (a, i, u). English /æ/ ( cat ), /ʌ/ ( cut ) and /ɑ/ ( cot ) can all sound like fatḥa to you. Practise all three until you can hear the difference. | ☐ OK☐ Fix | |
| 7 | Articles: a, an, the — or nothing | Arabic has a definite article ( ال ) but no indefinite article. So learners often drop a/an (“I am teacher” → I am a teacher ). Arabic also uses ال for general ideas, but English uses no article: Life is hard. I like coffee. (not “The life”, “the coffee”). | ☐ OK☐ Fix | |
| 8 | Present: Simple vs Continuous | Arabic sentences in the present often have no verb “to be”: “He teacher”, “She tired”. English always needs am / is / are : He is a teacher. She is tired. | ☐ OK☐ Fix | |
| 9 | Present Perfect vs Past Simple | Arabic uses the present tense for something that started in the past and continues: “I live here since two years.” In English: I’ve lived here for two years. | ☐ OK☐ Fix | |
| 10 | Words That Go Together | Common translation traps: “open the light” → turn on the light; “close the TV” → turn off the TV; “I have 30 years” → I’m 30 ; “my brother he works” → my brother works ; “take a decision” → make a decision (in Canada). | ☐ OK☐ Fix | |
| 11 | What Makes Canadian English Canadian | If you learned British English, remember: lift → elevator , flat → apartment , queue → line-up . Everyone will still understand the British words. | ☐ OK☐ Fix | |
